NOTES

Seeking comfort is a 60-minute soundwalk that invites participants to stroll, even linger and loiter, and listen to the sounds of Vancouver's alleys and beyond.

As Frauke Behrendt writes, "soundwalking is a spatio-temporal, embodied, situated, multi-sensory and mobile practice" (Behrendt, 2019, 251). Inspired by this and what Jean-Luc Nancy describes as voices possessing a presence that moves and breathes beyond a location, and, in particular, Hildegard Westerkamp's seminal notions on the intermixing of aural ecologies, Seeking comfort encourages listening to the milieu of pandemic life through the lens of public and domestic space (Nancy, 1983; Westercamp, 2020).
